2. Background and objectives

Accessibility Services ("ACS") is replacing its public marketing website. This SOW covers the work to replatform and refresh the public experience and content: how the site looks, reads, and guides visitors, and the underlying implementation so it can be maintained and extended over time.

Objectives:

- Present a modern, professional experience comparable to peer firms in architecture and construction that hire or refer work to ACS.
- Replace legacy implementation with a modern technical foundation that is straightforward with the ability to update using AI tools as content and offers evolve.
- Improve marketing effectiveness: trust-oriented elements where appropriate, clear calls to action, plain language, and navigation paths that help different visitor types reach the right services and information about them quickly.
- Site structure that is compatible with a full-featured third-party training offering (registration, payment, online content, calendaring, issue completion certificates) when ACS chooses one. Note that the plan is to incorporate a training or LMS system, not build one in this effort.
- Include working email contact forms that reach ACS-designated recipients.
- Convert all existing blog content. Later, an external, less-technical means for adding blog content may be added in a future SOW, but this SOW does not include a blogging platform. Blog updates will be made manually for the time being.
- Add new copy, testimonials, statistics, and related wording across the site, delivered in phased page work as described in Sections 3 and 5. New copy or wording will come from ACS and be incorporated, formatted and included by Advocara.

Phased delivery, fees, and exclusions follow Sections 3–5 and Section 4.

3. Scope of services (summary)

Advocara will perform the following:

1. Phase I — Convert the site to the new technical foundation, add critical new content supplied by ACS, and complete the work described in Section 5 (Phase I). Much of the new content was not on the previous public site in usable form, so it was not part of the content brought forward from the old site.
2. Phase II — Review and update content on five major pages with input supplied by ACS, as agreed at kickoff.
3. Phase III — Review and update the three remaining major pages after Phase II, with input supplied by ACS, and provide the handoff described in Section 5 (Phase III). Note that we anticipate 9 major page areas total (five in Phase II and three in Phase III).

As work items are identified organically through insights and brainstorming through phases I–III above, they will be tracked and prioritized in a future work item list, but new work items outside this scope will require a signed amendment to this SOW or a new SOW.

4. Out of scope

The following are not included in the fees for Phases I–III unless added in a signed change order:

- Full site search.
- Integration of 3rd party Training or Learning Management System (LMS).
- Live chat, AI chat, or similar widgets.
- A content management system (CMS) for blogs or other dynamic page updates; blog material for existing blogs will be included, however.
- Certain technical tasks outside site development such as mapping the ACS web domain DNS entries to a new hosting provider will be done by ACS staff.
- Paying the hosting bill (likely about $20/month per authorized developer on the Vercel "Pro" plan), and any related bills such as email, content management, code repository (likely github) will be ACS responsibilities

5. Phases — deliverables

Phase I — Technical foundation and new content

Advocara will:

- Complete conversion to a next.js/typescript/HTML foundation.
- Connect the contact form so submissions reach the inboxes ACS specifies, once ACS provides what is needed on its side for email delivery.
- Run a working session (or short series) on positioning: who the site is for, how ACS differs from others, relationship to United Spinal, and how California and Texas offices should be presented; produce a short written summary of decisions that drive copy.
- Implement agreed technical and user-experience fixes that do not depend on new copy from ACS.
- Apply the first round of copy and layout changes on the home page and consulting overview (or another subset agreed in writing), consistent with the written summary—not a rewrite of the entire site.
- Add critical new information supplied by ACS. This does not include a full extension effort of all major sub-pages (nine anticipated in Phases II and III) but should include the front page and must-have information to form a coherent site. Information areas include:

- Client testimonials (synthetic, or with required permission obtained).
- Accurate firm statistics (such as years in practice, project counts, geographic reach, team size) for public display.
- Phone number for use in the header and calls to action if phone contact is desired.
- California and Texas point person contact information (beyond what was already available from the prior site).
- Texas RAS: regulatory detail, links to required forms as applicable, and fee presentation for smaller projects if ACS chooses to publish fees.
- CASp: California regulatory detail, explanation of qualified-defendant services as ACS approves, and fee presentation for smaller projects if ACS chooses to publish fees.
- Team member office locations and professional credentials, as ACS provides them.
- Project/client list, with descriptive text.
- Google ad tracking or a similar mechanism. ACS may need to supply a Google account token or key to link ad tracking to ACS accounts.

If ACS also supplies optional material in the same period (for example, narrative descriptions for selected projects), Advocara will integrate it within reasonable effort.

Advocara will perform a quality pass on affected areas: links, layout on common devices, and basic accessibility checks on what was changed.

ACS will provide mail access to allow the web form to send emails.

Acceptance: ACS receives a preview or staging environment showing the contact path working (or a written description of any blocker that depends solely on ACS). No critical user paths in scope are left knowingly broken. Front page key information is updated. Remaining sub-page items are listed for Phase II work. The site may be publishable when ACS wishes; ACS may choose to hold off until Phases II and III sub-pages are complete.

Phase II — Five major page updates

ACS will review content on five major pages (for example: landing with general consulting overview, Texas RAS, CASp, about, and project/client list — final five by mutual agreement). Advocara will update the site with all new text provided, and perform rewording, formatting or other changes as needed to ensure a professional look and feel. Updates will be driven by written input from ACS. For each page, Advocara will adjust headings and page metadata for search as agreed and confirm calls to action and contact links behave as intended.

Acceptance: Written sign-off on the five pages, or a written list of deferrals moved to Phase III or a shared work list.

Phase III — Three remaining major pages and handoff

Advocara will review and update content on the three major pages not covered in Phase II, as identified in writing before Phase II closes (for example: training, technical assistance, legal defense/expert witness — exact three by mutual agreement). For training pages, layout and text may include links to an external scheduling or learning system; building registration or payment on this site requires a change order.

Advocara will deliver a short handoff note describing how ACS can request ongoing text and content updates after this SOW is complete, without implying that a content management system is included unless added in a signed amendment or new SOW.

Acceptance: Written sign-off on those three pages and delivery of the handoff note.

6. ACS responsibilities

ACS will:

- Name a primary contact and, if helpful, a reviewer for sensitive or legal copy.
- Supply accurate business facts, regulatory or legal language its counsel approves, permissions for testimonials and images, and brand assets as needed.
- Take part in the Phase I working session and respond to drafts on a schedule that keeps milestones realistic (see Section 10).
- Arrange hosting, DNS, and email or domain settings on its side when needed for launch or form delivery.

If ACS needs more time on inputs, milestone dates can be adjusted in writing. Lack of response is not approval.

7. Advocara responsibilities

Advocara will:

- Perform the work in Sections 3 and 5 professionally.
 - Track a shared work or punch list as the record of in-scope items and priorities.
 - Flag blockers (missing copy, approvals, or access) promptly.
 - Not perform out-of-scope work without a signed change order.

8. Reviews, acceptance, and revisions

- Each phase ends with written acceptance, or a written punch list; Advocara addresses punch-list items within 15 business days of receiving the punch list. Punch list items must be a list of incorrect, missing or substantially low-quality issues or gaps, and not new features, refinements, or ideas outside the scope of this SOW.
 - One round of substantive revision per major page (of the nine anticipated major pages) are included; further, incremental and iterative rounds are out of scope for this SOW and require a signed amendment or new SOW.

9. Fees and payment schedule

Total cost proposed is $5,000 for this SOW.

Proposed milestone payments are:

Milestone	Percent of fee	Amount
Project Kickoff	30%	1,500
Phase I acceptance (technical foundation and new content)	35%	1,750
Phase II acceptance (five major pages)	15%	750
Phase III final acceptance (three major pages)	20%	1,000

10. Schedule and dependencies

- Advocara will strive to complete Phase I in two to three weeks, depending on ACS content delivery for new material.
- Advocara will strive to complete each of Phases II and III one week after required ACS input is received.
- ACS will strive to supply required information at the rate of 1-2 weeks per major page area.

11. Change orders

Work outside Sections 3–5 or the agreed shared list requires agreement in writing by both parties.

12. Intellectual property and licenses

All business content and messaging belongs to ACS. Advocara retains rights to pre-existing tools, techniques and general methods; ACS retains rights to its own materials and marks.

13. Confidentiality and publicity

During the course of this work, Advocara and ACS may learn about proprietary or competitive information, such as pricing, positioning, business plans or other information. Neither party will disclose non-public information learned during this engagement that the other party is not actively releasing.

14. Term and termination

Either party may terminate with 30 days written notice.

If ACS terminates in the middle of a phase, and more than 4 hours work has been done in that phase, payment for that phase will be due. ACS is entitled to the completed phase output if they pay for the phase.

If Advocara terminates in the middle of a phase, no payment will be due for that phase. Advocara must submit all work product complete to that point if Advocara terminates.
